

"Education is one of the most important rights in our lives, and as a teacher, there is a responsibility in how this education is delivered. Coming from a performing arts background, I pride myself on leading students through creative, multi-faceted sessions, designed so as they are the Sherlock Holmes of their own education. By encouraging my students to explore and unearth both the questions and answers for themselves, I feel my students can take ownership and responsibility of their education."

OPHIR BURTON

English Teacher

Teaching since 2017,

Performance Artist, Musician, Theatre Maker, Actor and Writer.

Certificates

BA (Hons) Music Theatre, Falmouth University;

TEFL Certificate (Teaching English as a Foreign Language).

Qualified to teach

English up to Foundation.

Success Cases

Visiting schools across the UK, Ophir was responsible for delivering STEM workshops. These workshops introduced students to engineering, with the aim to get them inspired and engaged in the field, and current related issues. Some of the schools were in deprived areas with disruptive students who were not necessarily interested. But on many occasions, Ophir received feedback from head teachers and members of faculty that the students were inspired and engaged with the day in ways that they hadn't seen before.